

European Centre for Modern Languages of the Council of Europe

Call for proposals for the programme 2020-2023

Inspiring innovation in language education:
changing contexts, evolving competences

Are you active in the field of language education, perhaps as a teacher, teacher educator, researcher, curriculum or materials writer?

The ECML Call for proposals offers the opportunity to benefit from a unique European platform to negotiate, communicate and publish your innovative ideas. You can make a genuine contribution towards influencing language education in Europe.

If you work and live in an ECML member state and would like to share and enrich your ideas on language education through European collaboration, then we would like to hear from you!

Inspiring innovation in language education

The ECML helps bridge the gap between language policy and education practice in formal as well as in informal/non-formal learning contexts.

It brings together specialists from all over Europe to work on developing new methods and materials for language education in a changing world.

On its website the ECML offers a wide range of free resources for language teachers, teacher educators and other education professionals.

Priorities in language education in ECML member states

The priority areas of this Call for proposals are based on needs in ECML member states, reflect views of language professionals and take account of developments at the Council of Europe and other European and international organisations.

Would you like to address one or more of these priorities in the context of an ECML project? Are you interested in developing user-friendly, practical resources which can be easily adapted to accommodate different national contexts, with the support of a renowned European institution?

Tempted? Please consult the dedicated website for further details on applying.

Deadline for proposals: 22 April 2019
